The Gray-Eyed Man of Destiny

BOOK FIVE: TRUXILLO

by Alejandro Bolaños-Geyer

William Walker The Gray-Eyed Man of Destiny

William Walker (1824-1860), the “Gray-Eyed Man of Destiny,” is the indispensable root that anchors the Sandinista revolution and current U.S. involvement in Central America in true historical perspective.

Walker was the hottest news personality between the Mexican War and the Civil War—for a time the most talked of figure in the United States. Yet today probably not one U.S. citizen in ten thousand has ever heard of William Walker—a lost character in American history.

But although forgotten even in his home state of Tennessee, Walker is still vividly remembered in Central America as a devil with horns and a tail. Elementary school books proudly acclaim the National War of 1856-57, when the ruthless imperialistic invader William Walker and his Yankee mercenaries were driven out of Nicaragua by the freedom fighters of the five Central American republics.

William Walker was a “quiet, modest student” before he was suddenly transformed in 1849 into the “bold, daring, dauntless revolutionist and warrior.” The great change in his character, which occurred on the death of his fiancée, has never been explained satisfactorily. His many shifts in occupation from doctor to lawyer to journalist and to soldier of fortune have never been explained either. Walker remains as much a mystery today as he was to his contemporaries, even to his closest friends.

These pages record the process of unraveling the mystery of the “Gray-Eyed Man of Destiny,” unlocking the hidden springs of Walker’s mind; and they bring into sharp focus the stormy scenes during the early stages of U.S. imperialism climaxing in the Mexican War.

Walker’s forays into Mexico, Nicaragua, and Honduras, until his death by firing squad at Truxillo in 1860, will be the subject of succeeding volumes.

The Man of Destiny

Yo soy yo y mi circunstancia.
José Ortega y Gasset.

This fifth volume of William Walker's biography follows his steps from May, 1857, when he was expelled from Nicaragua, until his death in Honduras in September, 1860.

In his last speech, when facing the firing squad at Truxillo, Walker begged pardon from those he had injured and expressed a wish that his death benefited society.

I trust that the facts of his life recorded in this biography--of his inner world and of the external circumstances that combined to create the Gray-Eyed Man of Destiny--will help fulfill his last wish.

Again, I express my gratitude to those who have contributed with their advice and personal attention to the tasks of this work, in particular: to professor Steven Blakemore for his attentive, critical reading of my manuscript; to Dr. Orlando Icaza for his excellent drawings; to my son-in-law Julio Velázquez for the maps; to my late brother-in-law Thomas Bacott for the photomechanics of the illustrations; to the late Nicaraguan historian Andrés Vega Bolaños; to my friend and preceptor el poeta bibliócrata Mario Cajina-Vega; to Frederic Rosengarten; to John C. Moran; to Tony Falcon; to my brother Enrique; and to my wife, Patricia and our children--Alex, Michael, Amanda, Patrick (constant as his Pentax), Robert, Ricardo and Carla--to whom I owe large debts of love and understanding for their warm support and personal sacrifices.
